HERE IT IS AGAIN.

Every little while, when [illegible] Gazette [illegible] pleasure, [illegible] that [illegible] Constitution [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] country [illegible] be compelled to [illegible] the people [illegible] no such [illegible] would be [illegible] congress, [illegible] senate, which [illegible] lords, that [illegible] with [illegible] tion.

Yet it might not be [illegible] president had [illegible] these [illegible] the people [illegible] these matters, to the [illegible] disfavor of [illegible] is reached in matters of this great [illegible] tion. By the English system it is always possible for the executive to consult any time by an appeal to the people. By [illegible] upon any pending measure. In this country a legislative question which becomes the issue of bitter contention at a certain session of congress [illegible] disappeared from the public mind by the time the politicians [illegible]

In the first place, this is not true. It is not always possible for the Crown to secure such an expression, as is abundantly proved by the present state of affairs in England on the Home Rule question. In the second place there is a good deal of humbug in this everlasting talk about an appeal to the people. The people often need to be guarded against their own rash impulses, and the framers of our Constitution knew it, and most wisely provided just such safeguards in the coordinate autonomy of the Executive and Legislative and Judicial departments in the long tenure of office for Senators, and in the election of only one-third of their number at a time.

The truth is that the British Constitution is now strained almost to the breaking point. A complete change in it, a most radical change, has been effected [illegible] [illegible] can effect it by a party vote in the House, with no debate, in its most important features, and by the suspending use of the closure in its most drastic form. Does any American want our Constitution amendable in that way?

If Mr. Cleveland did use the expression referred to, as true, he is sorry for it by this time, and that it was a momentary explosion and not the expression of a deliberate desire.

AN UNJUSTIFIABLE IMPOSITION.

It is time that a word [illegible] in this State in behalf of the [illegible] who do not want, by [illegible] believe that [illegible] the majority of the sex. It is too [illegible] taken for granted, because [illegible] women who do not want to vote are saying so with great persistency, that they represent the sex, and that all question of women's suffrage is inimical to women of their domestic and their rights. This is a false assumption which is not warranted by the facts. It needs to be proved, and no good has been proved.

successful speeches ever made in the house was that of Bryan's of a few years ago, in which he employed Dickens as a basis for some delightful remarks of Mr. Holman and the Democratic party in general.

Among the young men who have won great reputations of late are Bulliet of Iowa, who has a lively, interesting style of address which is very taking, Bryan of Nebraska, who is both an orator and a debater, and who is able to take care of himself anywhere and in any company, and General Black of Illinois, the former pension commissioner, who comes from a family of veterans and has already made his mark in the house.—Boston Herald.

Washing Cooking Utensils.

Sometimes the most careful washing will not wholly remove the flavor or odor of food from the utensil in which it was cooked. This is frequently the case with fish, onions, cabbage, etc., but there is a remedy which may be a little trouble and is well worth trying.

After any of these articles have been cooked scald the utensil carefully with soap and water. Now carefully fill it with cold water, and for each quart of water add about a tablespoonful of dissolved washing soda. Place on the fire and let the water get boiling hot. Now turn the water into the sink. Rinse the utensil with cold water, and on using it dry well. It will be found entirely free from odor.

Knew His Ship.

"Did you know the Reverend Cyrus last evening?" said a young man to his lady friend.

"Of course not," replied the young lady, with a toss of her head and a contemptuous look. "Do you see me associating with young men who are not members of the church?"

The young man looked crestfallen, and the young lady went on with the story of the evening's entertainment, which proved the deepest mystery of the season.—Boston Record.

Mohammedanism.

Mohammed was a prophet. He is reverently claimed to be a descendant of Shem. Contrary to his first intention at the age of 42 He lost his father in infancy and his mother in childhood, was a trifler, a merchant, and married a wealthy widow 15 years older than himself. He lived longer deserted with visions in the cave. He had interviews with the angel Gabriel.—New York Truth.

Peerless.

"Your daughter is without a peer."
